Abstract

Sustainable education is a crucial mean of social interaction at times of difficulties. Unexpected emergencies have recently drawn attention to the pivotal role that technology can play to supplement and sustain foreign language education. This review study outlines the basic tenets of foreign language education through emergency remote teaching. Besides a comprehensive discussion of distinctive features of emergency remote teaching, this study sheds light on advantages and disadvantages associated with emergency remote teaching. Eventually, the study offers practical suggestions to handle critical issues in emergency teaching practices.
